

CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT

We would like to invite you and up to 10 of your fifth and sixth form students to a one-day Computing conference organised by Computing at School. It promises to be a highly informative, engaging and enjoyable day with speakers from industry, education, university and research.

The day, by invitation only, is aimed at those students who are studying A level Computing but will also be beneficial for Science or Mathematics students who may be considering studying Computer Science at University. Equally, the day can be an excellent stimulus for those considering their A Level choices.

I do hope you and your students can join us for what promises to be an interesting event. A full agenda, including speakers and other materials will be available on our website www.computingatschool.org.uk shortly.

In the meantime to register your attendance please visit <http://casnw10.eventbrite.com/> using the password casnw10cas or if you would like further information please contact Adrian Jackson email: a.r.jackson@open.ac.uk

The Computing at School Working Group is an informal group that aims to promote the teaching of computing at school. Our membership is broad, and includes teachers, examiners, parents, university faculty, and employers.

CAS was born out of our excitement with our discipline, combined with a serious concern that students are being turned off computing by a combination of factors that have conspired to make the subject seem dull and pedestrian. Our goal is to put the fun back into computing at school.
